ISSUE

In-Home Supportive Service (IHSS) consumers receive a variety of domestic care services designed to allow them to remain in their homes rather than receive more expensive care in a residential care facility or skilled nursing facility. Included among these services is personal hygiene assistance, accompaniment during travel to health-related appointments, yard hazard abatement and protective supervision that reduce the need for other supportive services.

County social service departments are responsible for determining a consumer's service eligibility, conducting needs assessments, and the authorization of an IHSS provider to perform the tasks needed by the consumer. Compensation for the worker is determined by each county's established hourly rate for the time necessary for those functions.

Approximately 2% of IHSS consumers, or over 10,000 Californians, are legally blind. Unfortunately for these consumers, reading and document completion assistance is not a covered service under IHSS. Reading assistance is critical for consumers who need to know about notices that may affect their ability to live independently, including insurance coverage, prescription drug labels, housing notifications or other time sensitive information that may require action.

SOLUTION

SB 199 would expand the definition of authorized services under the IHSS program to include no more than two hours per month of assistance in reading and completing financial or other documents for IHSS consumers who are blind. Access to these services will be subject to a consumer's needs assessment conducted by county social service departments.

This service is critical for consumers who need to know about notices that may affect their IHSS services, or medical bills, or the terms of prescription medications. Without assistance, those with visual impairments may be unaware of critical information and developments affecting their health and well-being for days or weeks until they find a friend, relative or alternative program to read or complete the documents for them.
